Listening Books is a charity offering thousands of fantastic audiobooks for secondary school pupils who have an illness, disability or learning difficulty which makes reading a struggle.

As a charity, we are able to offer low-cost memberships to schools:

£50 per year gives you:
5 downloads or streams at any one time, with a maximum of 25 per week allowing you to access up to 1300 audiobooks across the year

£100 per year gives you:
10 downloads or streams at any one time, with a maximum or 50 per week, allowing you to download up to 2600 titles across the year

If you need a larger amount of downloads or streams to meet your school’s requirements, please contact the library on 0207 234 0522 or email library@listening-books.org.uk

Our titles
• Our library supports the Scottish and National Curriculums from Key Stage 2 to A-Level, covering subjects including geography, science, citizenship and history.
• The majority of set texts for English are also available, such as An Inspector Calls, To Kill a Mockingbird and The Crucible, including study guides to help with revision and essay writing.
• We also stock all of the commonly studied Shakespeare plays and a huge array of poetry collections.
• We aim to provide accessible formats of as many of the titles set by the main exam boards as possible.
• Many titles are recorded inhouse and are unavailable elsewhere. If there is a title you need that we don’t have, please let us know.
• We also offer lots of great titles by popular fiction authors such as Michael Morpurgo, Charlie Higson, Benjamin Zephaniah, Malorie Blackman, Eoin Colfer and Philip Pullman.
• You can view our full catalogue by following this link http://www.listening-books.org.uk/library.aspx and searching by Key Stage, subject and author.
• New titles are being added all the time.

Benefits of the service
• Listening to books for school is a great way for teachers and SENCOs to include children and young people with learning difficulties in mainstream schools.
• It can help improve confidence, encourage independent learning and can inspire a life-long love of literature.
• It can assist children and young people with dyslexia, for example, by helping them to ‘decode’ the text and visualise the story.

Great ideas for using our audiobooks
• Teachers or SENCo’s can transfer audiobooks from school computers to pupils’ portable players for them to take home and listen in their own time. Pupils can then use them as revision tools or they can listen to fiction titles as a way of relaxing alone.
• You can enhance the work done on a particular subject by suggesting pupils listen to a related audiobook - there are many audiobooks to complement studies in our library from the Cold War to urban change, migration and sustainable development.
• The service will encourage pupils to search the catalogue independently to find the popular titles their peers are reading to get them excited about discussing books.
• Why not play an audiobook to your pupils with special educational needs while they read along with a copy of their book to help with reading and word recognition?
• How about setting up a listening post in the library?
• You can organise downloading audiobooks to pupils’ devices so they can listen and learn on-the-go, effectively allowing them to turn any space into a learning environment.
• Don’t forget, some titles can also be burnt to a disc to lend to a pupil who might not have a PC at home.
